Canon Theologicus

In omni opere spectandum est verbum Dei. Quae igitur opera mandante Deo fiunt, ea non fiunt nostra voluntate. sed Dei. Nos instrumenta tantum sumus. Sicut opera legis ea dicuntur quae fiunt iubente lege. Quae autem opera fiunt non mandante Deo, ea sunt opera manum nostrarum. Et quia sunt sine verbo Dei sunt impia et damnata. LIST

OF THE

FAC-SIMILES IN LITHOGRAPHY

ILLUSTRATING THE

VARIOUS STYLES OF HAND-WRITING

USED BY

PHILIP MELANCTHON.

PLATE I—facing the Title.

THESE specimens have been selected from various portions, as stated, of MELANCTHON's Common Place Book, No. 4637; many others might have been given, as will be observed by the reader in the examination of that extraordinary volume; for example, see pages 120, 330, 410-23, 491, &c. 499, 604, 829, &c.

The signatures at the bottom are taken from pages 461, 184, 546, and 810.

PLATE II—page 50.

No. I, II, III, and IV are from the Latin Bible, No. 710, to which the reader is referred to the note there given. A careful and minute examination of the volume itself will, it is believed, satisfactorily shew the correctness of the observations on the peculiar character of the writing.

On reference to the Catalogue, No. 3147, from which No. 5 and 6 have been taken, no reference is made of the MS. notes by MELANCTHON: this circumstance was owing to some accident, as the numerous interlineary gloss with which the greater part of the text is illustrated, is beautifully written, and very much corresponding with that and of the notes in No. 710. The specimen, No. 6, shewing the imitation of the type, is also very curious.

No. VII.—The reader is here presented with, probably, the most minute and beautiful specimen from MELANCTHON's pen; and in which a few words are written in imitation of type.

No. VIII.—On the recto of the leaf from which this specimen is taken, is an epigram, written by MELANCTHON, in imitation of type.

No. IX.—The selection of this peculiar style of writing was given to shew the similarity between the word "Philippus" and MELANCTHON's signature at the bottom of Plate I.

PLATE III—page 51.

No. I.—The circumstance of MELANCTHON'S having written his name abridged in the Philosophical Works of Cicero, hereafter alluded to, was not discovered until after printing the note accompanying the volume from which this fac-simile is taken.

No. II.—It may be necessary to observe, that the writing with which the original of this is executed is of a much lighter nature: this equally applies to the previous specimen.

No. III.—This is taken from the title of the tract by Ecclus, and given for the purpose of shewing its accordance with that of No. 4, taken from the Common Place Book, No. 4637.

No. V.—The volume from which this is taken, was purchased lately by Mr. LEIGH SOTHEBY, from Mr. STRAKER, Bookseller; and it is an important one in the illustration of MELANCTHON'S writing; for in several instances the type is copied, and the marginal notes are all in a similar style to that given, and which correspond exactly with that of No. 7, in the opposite and previous plate.

Mr. LEIGH SOTHEBY has had the pleasure of returning the volume to Mr. Straker.

PLATE IV—page 58*.

Specimens I to V inclusive are from the Octavo Edition of the Bible, No. 755*, discovered in the library of the late ALEX. CHALMERS, Esq.:—No. I, Exod. cap. xiv; No. II, Levit. cap. 20; No. III, from the fly-leaf at the end of the volume; No. IV, Esaias, cap. xliii; No. V, Esaias, cap. xliv.

No. VI, VII, are from the Folio Edition, No. 755 : the one from the 2d chapter of St. Luke, and the other from the 30th of Deuteronomy.

PLATE V—page 207.

The centre portions of this Plate are from the third volume of the Works of Ovid, 2897; the situations from which they are taken are mentioned on the top of each separate Fac-simile; the same observation applies to the Fac-similes on either side from the Works of Terence, No. 3739.

PLATE VI—page 281.

Fac-similes of the type, &c. of the "Historiale," of Vincentius.

PLATE VII—page 332.

No. I, II, III, and IV, from the Grammatical Collections, No. 4632. The first specimen is taken from the title of the printed work; the second from the commencement of the MS. collections; the third and fourth being from the end of two of the Treatises.

No. V, VI, and VII, from the Collections, No. 4633, where, in the note, each Fac-simile is referred to.

No. VIII, from the reverse of folio 10 in the Treatise by Alanus, No. 4628.

No. IX, from the Appendix to the Chronicle, No 4636.

PLATE VIII—page 333.

From the Annotations on the Psalms at the end of the Psalter, No. 4634; and also a Specimen from the Common-Place Book.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Dr. Kloss, the proprietor of this extraordinary collection of books, devoted, from an early period of his life, all his hours of relaxation from the duties of his profession to the study of Early Bibliography, with the view of publishing a Series of Supplements to Panzer's Typographical Annals. In so doing, he was not content with obtaining information in his pursuit from the various works that had been published on the subject, but he united the pleasure of collecting the books themselves with that of writing upon their contents; and the opportunities afforded him, from being a native and resident of Germany, enabled him oftentimes to become the purchaser of libraries, on occasions where, perhaps, the overtures of foreigners had been rejected.

Dr. Kloss finding that, with the great increase of his library, his leisure time for continuing additions to the work of Panzer diminished, abandoned his original intention, and confined all his attention to the formation of the present collection, which he limited, with, comparatively speaking, few exceptions, to works printed within the year 1536; that being the period to which Panzer carried down his work.

In thus altering his views, he devoted himself especially to the accquisition of obscure and imperfectly described works, to the exclusion of those which would have added to the number without increasing the value of his library.

His long and arduous bibliographical studies, aided by the possession of so extensive a collection, enabled him oftentimes, by comparison, to ascribe more correctly than had heretofore been done, the names of the printers, the places of printing, and the periods of the publication of works which were without any indication; in which cases he has, as far as his own judgment enabled him, inscribed these particulars upon the cover of each work, together with a reference to its number in Panzer.

The compilers of this Catalogue have, according to the particular request of Dr. Kloss, inserted these references, and particulars as there given. They have adhered to one general alphabetical arrangement of the books under their respective authors, with the exception of some works which it was deemed of importance to keep together; as will appear in the annexed view of the general contents and richness of the Library:—

I. A Collection of Donatuses, illustrative of the Discovery of the Art of Printing, the most extensive ever brought before the public.—See Cat., p. 93, No. 1287 to 1303.

II. Editions of the Bible, in Latin, German, &c. Considerable importance is added to this class, from the circumstance of several of the editions containing manuscript annotations by the hand of the great theologian and reformer, Philip Melancthon.

III. Bulls and Letters of Indulgence, an extensive and interesting collection.—See under Ecclesia, p. 106, No. 1470 to 1508.

IV. Rituals of the Romish Church, Missals, Breviaries, Horæ, &c.—See Ecclesia, p. 96, No. 1327 to 1360, 1366 to 1413; p. 112, No. 1517 to 1552.

V. Lives of the Saints, a curious and rare collection.—See Vitæ Sanctorum, p. 263, No. 3691 to 3722.

 In this class No. 3710 has been inserted by mistake.

VI. Sources of the Roman Law, Civil and Ecclesiastical Laws, the Statute Laws of Countries and Cities, Introductions to the Study of the Law, &c.—See Libri de Curia Romana, p. 102, No. 1414 to 1426; Jus Civile, p. 161, No. 2219 to 2276; Jus Canonicum, p. 171, No. 2373 to 2412; Statuta Civilia et Ecclesiastica, p. 173, No. 2414 to 2431; Vocabularia Juris, &c. p. 175, No. 2432 to 2448.

VII. The Classics. This class forms a most important feature in the collection, as it comprises upwards of One Thousand different Editions of the Greek and Latin Classical Authors, amongst which is a brilliant assemblage of the Editiones Principes.

There is, however, a peculiar circumstance that renders this class doubly interesting; namely, that a very great number of the volumes have passed through the hands, and many of them have been the property, of the great scholar Melancthon, who has enriched them with numerous manuscript notes. The reader need scarcely be reminded, that, besides his achievements as a religious reformer, Melancthon is recorded in the annals of literature as the editor and restorer of Terence, of whose works it is, therefore, interesting to observe, that this collection contains no less than twenty-four various editions, thirteen of which are illustrated with Melancthon's autograph annotations.

Of the various works of Cicero, the present collection contains upwards of One Hundred Editions, forty-five of which are illustrated in a similar manner. Not to particularize further the names of other classical authors, it may suffice generally to observe, that the library exhibits a proportionable degree of richness and variety in them all.

VIII. Vocabularies and Grammatical Treatises, a very rich collection, interspersed throughout the Catalogue: for the vocabularies without authors, see Vocabularia, p. 273, No. 3830 to 3869, 3979 to 3990.

IX. Theology: a selection of the best Theological Writers; an extensive and rare collection of Sermons.—See Sermones variæ, p. 251, No. 3522 to 3556.

The Works in the German and Dutch Languages, forming the eighteenth and nineteenth day's sales, comprise the most curious and rare assemblage of early printed works in those languages which have ever been brought before the public at one view. The collection is particularly rich in Early Chronicles, Histories, and Romances; Early Translations of the Classics; Works illustrative of the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, Civil and Ecclesiastical Law, &c.

MELANCTHON MANUSCRIPTS.

It has been already mentioned in the general advertisement to the present Catalogue, that the following Collection of Books comprises a considerable number which have either been the property, or, at least, have passed through the hands, of the celebrated Reformer Melancthon, and have been enriched by copious annotations from his pen.

Whatever degree of interest, in a literary or historical point of view, may be attached to this circumstance, the compilers of this volume, who have prepared the collection for sale, and who were the first to make the discovery of this feature in its contents, have thought it incumbent upon them to support, by the best testimony they can adduce, the position which they have ventured to take up on the subject. For at the same time that they feel confident in their own minds of the correctness of the views they have taken, they would not presume to dictate a ready concurrence in their opinions by the public, without advancing some more solid arguments beyond mere declarations in their support. But here also they feel that their task is not a very light nor a very simple one.

Nearly three centuries have elapsed since the period in which Melancthon lived, during which time the writings now proposed to be identified as his, have remained in total and probably uninterrupted obscurity. Under such circumstances it can hardly be expected that much direct testimony could be procured with respect to them; and in the absence of that, the compilers have been obliged to have recourse to the more tedious, but not always less satisfactory, method of circumstantial evidence. This they have endeavoured to collect under two distinct heads:—

First, the history and known character of MELANCTHON himself, with the general nature of his studies and occupations; and secondly, the character of the writings in the volumes now presented to the public;—circumstances connected with them, and the internal evidence (both as to subjects and handwriting) they contain of being the fruits of his pen.

PHILIP MELANCTHON (whose family name was Schwartzerd) was born at Bretten, a small town in Saxony, on the 16th of February, 1497. His education was at an early age directed by his maternal grandfather, JOHN REUTER, from whose care he was afterwards removed to a public school at Bretten, and thence, after a very short stay, to the academy at Pforzheim. Here he soon fell under the particular notice of JOHN REUCHLIN (called CAPNIO), an elegant scholar, and teacher of languages, under whose auspices young SCHWARTZERD first acquired the taste for Greek literature, in which he afterwards became so distinguished. It was here that his genius for composition began to shew itself; and PHILIP, amongst other poetical essays in which he indulged, actually produced, when about eleven years of age, a humorous piece, in the form of a comedy, which he dedicated to his kind friend and instructor REUCHLIN, in whose presence it was performed by the schoolfellows of the youthful author. It was on this occasion that REUCHLIN gave him the name of MELANCTHON (from Μελας black, and χθων earth, being the Greek words synonymous with the German words Schwartz and erde, of which his paternal name was composed), by which he ever afterwards went.

After a residence of nearly two years at Pforzheim, MELANCTHON was sent to the University of Heidelberg, where he was matriculated on the 13th of October, 1509, in the twelfth year of his age. Here he was now looked upon as a youth of the highest promise, and, young as he was, appears to have been employed to compose most of the harangues that were delivered in the University, besides writing some pieces even for the professors themselves. Here, at this early age, he composed his Rudiments of the Greek Language, which were afterwards published. At Heidelberg, however, he remained only three years; the principal cause of his leaving it was his disappointment at being refused a higher degree in the University, solely, as it was alleged, on account of his youth.

In September 1512, accordingly, we find him entered at the University of Tubingen, where, in the following year, before he had attained the age of seventeen, he was created Doctor in Philosophy, or Master of Arts; and very soon commenced a course of public lectures, embracing an extraordinary variety of subjects, amongst which were the learned languages, rhetoric, logic, ethics, mathematics, and theology. It was here, in the year 1516, that he put forth his revision of the text of Terence, which had previously only appeared in a prosaic form, but which he reduced to its present more proper arrangement. A copy of the first edition of this interesting revision of the work will be found in the present Collection of Books, with his own manuscript corrections and additions on the margins (see Catalogue, No. 3463). Besides this, he entered into a general undertaking with Thomas Anshelmus (the printer of that work) to revise all the books printed by him; and amongst others on which he bestowed great labour and attention was a large work in folio, by Nauclerus, which he appears to have almost entirely re-written. In 1517 he printed an Oration on the Arts, and an original composition, in the form of a dialogue, entitled "Osci et Volsci."

After residing six years at Tubingen, he went in August 1518 to the University of Wittemberg, where, at the recommendation of Reuchlin, the Elector Frederic gave him the appointment of Greek Professor. He lost no time in commencing his public lectures; and such was the reputation he had acquired, that the public crowded to hear him in numbers which had, perhaps, never been collected together on similar occasions; some say his audiences consisted of upwards of fifteen hundred persons: others, that they amounted to a thousand beyond that number, particularly when treating upon on the works of Homer.

His residence at Wittemberg forms an interesting epoch in the life of MELANCTHON; inasmuch as it was here that he first became acquainted with LUTHER, whom, indeed, he appears to have instructed in the Greek language. The friendship which sprung up between these two celebrated individuals has been justly characterized as an event of the highest and happiest importance, not only in reference to their own future careers, but in its results in the advancement of the Reformation, which they both so zealously supported; the one with such vigorous and dauntless heroism—the other with such profound learning, cultivated taste, and sound discretion. Truth, as has been observed by one of MELANCTHON's biographers, Dr. COX, "Truth would undoubtedly have suffered, had the one been less energetic, or the other less moderate and cultivated." We have here also to consider MELANCTHON in the light of a literary reformer; in which character, notwithstanding the vindictive and bigotted opposition he met with at the outset, he achieved a success not less triumphant than useful. He laboured hard to free the philosophy of Aristotle (which then prevailed throughout Europe) from the errors in which it abounded; and composed a series of abridgments and popular treatises upon his Logic, Ethics, Physics, and the Nature of the Soul, which were adopted and continued to be taught in all the Lutheran schools for a long period.

MELANCTHON's energies were first called forth in the field of theological reform, in the year 1520, in consequence of the celebrated conference at Leipsic between ECKIUS and CARLOSTADT, as to the divine right of the Pope; which, after ten days' vigorous and noisy discussion, terminated without any definite result: HOFFMAN, the rector of the Leipsic University, refusing to give a decision in favour of either party. But, though the appointed judge of the dispute hesitated to commit himself by giving a decision, MELANCTHON, who was one of the assembled spectators, took a lively interest in the proceedings, and went away a confirmed disciple and supporter of the views of LUTHER. On the 15th of June, 1520, Pope LEO X issued his celebrated bull against this prince of reformers, who treated it with contempt, and publicly committed it to the flames. In January 1521, a second bull was issued against LUTHER, recapitulating the contents of the former bull, and formally excommunicating him. The Elector FREDERIC, in order to protect LUTHER from the violence of his enemies, forcibly conveyed him to his castle of Wartenberg; and, during his confinement there, his friend MELANCTHON took the lead, though with much hesitation and anxiety, of the reforming cause.

In this year MELANCTHON published his important and justly celebrated "Loci Communes Theologici," which instantly created a great sensation throughout France and Italy, notwithstanding its vigorous suppression by the popish inquisitors. It was in this year, also, that he was appointed by the Elector to direct his attention to the abolition of private popish masses; and he appears to have written somewhat satirically upon the subject of the mass generally, as may be observed on reference to No. 4633 note.

Not to follow MELANCTHON more closely through his busy and splendid history, it is important to the purpose of the present notice to record, that in the year 1524, he made a tour through various parts of Germany, taking Leipsic, Fulda, Frankfort, and Heidelberg, in his route. From this period to the year 1529 we find him still principally engaged in forwarding the work of reformation. In 1530 he drew up the celebrated Augsburg Confession; in curious connexion with which, the reader is referred to a note in illustration of the same volume last alluded to.

In 1535, MELANCTHON received invitations from two Potentates to visit their courts; viz., FRANCIS I of France, and HENRY VIII of England, both of which, however, he declined accepting. In this year the Academy of Wittemberg was removed to Jena, owing to an infectious disease which had got among the scholars; and MELANCTHON, in his capacity of Greek Professor, removed there also. He did not remain very long, the students and professors returning to Wittemberg early in 1536.

In 1539 he went to join the Conference at Frankfort; and, in the following year, attended the Diet at Hagenaw; and, afterwards, that at Worms, which opened in January 1541. On the third day, however, the proceedings of the Diet were suspended, owing to an order issued by the Emperor, desiring them to meet him in person at Ratisbon.

In the year 1546, when the persecution of the reformers was being carried on with renewed energy and bitterness, MARTIN LUTHER died; and MELANCTHON found himself left almost alone to bear the brunt of the war of opinion. To such a height were the animosities carried, that, in the latter end of the above year, the University of Wittemberg suffered a temporary dissolution; MELANCTHON then retired, with his wife and family, to Zerbst; after which he returned to Wittemberg, where, by his exertions, he collected again the greater part of the scattered disciples of LUTHER.

In 1557, MELANCTHON met his popish adversaries, for the last time, at Worms; after which the Elector sent for him to Heidelberg, where he heard the melancholy intelligence of his wife's death. In 1558 he published the first part of his "Chronicle," a portion having previously appeared, with the name of Carion as its author, in 1531; a copy of which, with considerable manuscript additions by MELANCTHON, occurs in the present collection (see No. 4636): This, his celebrated "Chronicle," to which he appears to have devoted much time, even until a few days before his death, was completed and published by his son-in-law, Dr. Peucer.

So active and vigorous did the mental faculties of MELANCTHON continue, up to the very last hour of his existence, that, notwithstanding the infirmities of body which daily grew upon him, he still strove to continue his useful labours; amongst which, with chief solicitude, he regarded his public lectures to his pupils, in which, however, from utter want of physical strength to crawl into his class-room, he ultimately failed, only five days before his decease, which occurred placidly, "in the midst of solemn vows and supplications," on the 19th of April, 1560.

So late as on the day previous, his bed was removed into his library, in order that he might still breathe his few remaining moments in the hallowed precincts of the labours and triumphs of his genius.

Having given this sketch of the life of Melancthon, it becomes necessary to treat more particularly of the manuscripts by his hand, which are now first brought under the notice of the public; and to inquire into the probable causes of their having so long remained in obscure neglect. In the first place, as to the general contents of these writings, whether in the form of MS. Compositions, or of Annotations upon Printed Books; any one who examines them cannot fail to observe, as an internal evidence of their identity, that they treat of subjects all singularly alike; or, at least all falling immediately within the scope of the studies to which Melancthon devoted his life, as religion, ethics, grammar, classical criticism, philosophy, &c. In many cases, which could be pointed out if it were deemed necessary, the annotations occurring in the various editions of the Bible correspond exactly, both as to the substance of their meaning and the points upon which they are written. Any reader who will carefully compare the MS. comments in illustration of the Gospel of St. Matthew, in the edition of the Bible No. 710, with those printed in the third volume of Melancthon's works, edited by Peucer, in 1562, will find this observation fully borne out; and it may, therefore, reasonably be considered, that these were his earliest labours on those subjects, which he subsequently matured for publication.

We now come to consider how these interesting documents have happened to remain so long in obscurity. A very rational solution of this question will probably suggest itself to the mind of the reader, who will at once refer to the history of Melancthon himself; the troublesome and bigotted times he lived in, the nature of his pursuits, the jealousy and malignity with which he was opposed in them, and, consequently, the precautions which he may very reasonably have adopted to protect his writings from the destruction with which his adversaries threatened them, and the vigilance with which the latter pursued their avowed object of obliterating all record of the very name of their hated opponent.

MELANCTHON had, of course, read of the fate which had attended the books and writings of the first reformer, WICLIFFE, and other eminent men. He had witnessed the condemnation of the works of Luther, and the vigorous steps which very early began to be taken for the suppression of his own.

Dr. COX, in speaking of his Loci Communi Theologici, states, "It was very popular both in France and Italy. At Venice it was published under the name of Messer Philippo de Terra Nera, which is the Italian translation of the word MELANCTHON, and was extensively read. Not a syllable of disapprobation was expressed, till one CORDELIER, who had read the work as it was first published, with the author's real name affixed, gave information to the Inquisitors, who, though they approved, or at least did not censure it, as the writings of PHILIPPO DE TERRA NERA, instantly suppressed it as the production of PHILIP MELANCTHON."—Life of Melancthon, chap. v.

Some idea of the precarious position in which MELANCTHON felt himself placed, not only in respect of his writings, but even of his person, may be formed from the fact recorded by Middleton in his Biographia Evangelica, that "MELANCTHON said he held his professor's place forty years, without ever being sure that he should not lose it before the end of the week."

That the fears which he entertained for the safety of his writings were not only well grounded, but subsequently fulfilled to the letter, will appear from the following note to the Memoir of MELANCTHON in the Biographie Universelle:—

"On trouve dans presques toutes les anciennes bibliotheques de France, des exemplaires des ouvrages classiques de MELANCTHON; mais il est rare que le frontispiece n'en soit pas mutilé, et que le nom de l'auteur n'en ait par été effacé ou tronqué avec une exactitude mineutieuse."

When all these circumstances are considered, it is remarkable that the very features in the present works which would lead a casual observer to doubt of their identity, become the strongest arguments as corroborative proof of their authenticity; namely, the total absence of MELANCTHON's name, either as their possessor or their author, and the diversity of styles of hand-writing in which the manuscripts have been executed.

MELANCTHON appears to have been imbued at an early age with a very justifiable apprehension of the unfriendly sentiments of his contemporaries, and a prudent anxiety to divert their notice from his literary possessions. He seems even to have been afraid of acknowledging his own property; and accordingly we find written in various works, (but evidently by the same hand), the fictitious names, for such they obviously were, of their pretended owners: for instance, on the first leaf of the Philosophical Works of Cicero, No. 1201, in which are manuscript notes from MELANCTHON's pen, we find the following entry: "Magistri Joannis Marci Rheti. O. 1511." That this name is a fictitious one, and that it was hit upon at hap-hazard by the writer, appears from the fact, that the name of the author, "Marci T. C.", is printed no less than four times on the same leaf, and evidently suggested one of the titles of which the above ostensible name is composed. But the most extraordinary circumstance, and a most important one, inasmuch as it fixes indubitably the identity of the real writer of these fictitious names, is yet to be told. At the bottom of the very page on which the above is written, and obscurely situated near the corner of the leaf, is an inscription, which it is confidently presumed can be nothing else than an abridgment for "Philippus Melancthon;" and which, owing to its abridgment and unimportant situation, had escaped the vigilance of MELANCTHON's spoliators. This inscription, and the above fictitious name, have been carefully copied in fac-simile, and are here presented to the reader.

Magistri Ioannis Mary

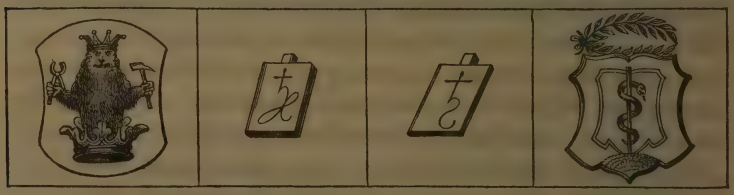
pro qui lauet

In connexion with this circumstance, the reader's attention is referred to the drawings executed by MELANCTHON in illustration of the Works of Ovid, No. 2897, in many of which a small tablet is introduced (see Fac-simile, plate v), inclosing a representation of the Cross bruising the serpent. In the folio volume of Roth-Scholtzius's engravings of the arms and symbols used by distinguished men, we find in Section 2, No. 7, the arms assumed by MELANCTHON; and in Section 28, No. 340, his crest, as taken from an old spoon handle. These have been copied in connexion with two cuts representing the character of the peculiar tablets alluded to; and the reader is left to judge of the prevailing resemblance of sentiment and intention which exist between them.

The device, by way of crest, on the left, is the Lion of the house of David, with the pincers and hammer, the implements and symbols of the crucifixion. The arms on the right are symbolic of the elevation of the serpent in the wilderness.



The almost endless variety, both in the size and style of the characters in which the present manuscripts are written, is such as to astonish the observer, and even, at first sight, to give rise to a very rational doubt of the fact of their being all by the same hand. When, however, the imperative necessity which urged MELANCTHON to conceal his productions is considered, he may reasonably be supposed to have taken no little trouble, and to have resorted to many artifices, to conceal the identity of his hand-writing, in the hope that some, if not the whole, of his productions might escape detection. It is a circumstance worthy of recollection in this place, that MELANCTHON, when only a boy, was especially patronized, and doubtless instructed, by REUCHLIN; whom, indeed, he appears to have closely followed in his avocations as a public teacher throughout the remainder of his life. It is recorded of REUCHLIN, that when he was a young man, studying the Greek literature at Paris, he gained his livelihood by copying manuscripts. Is it not very reasonable to suppose, that MELANCTHON profitted by the instruction of his friend and patron in this, to him highly important art, and learned the use of his pen in various styles, from the imitation of type to the smallest and most fluent script character which appears in the works now under consideration? In many cases, different styles are closely interwoven in the same work, particularly in his Common Place-Book. Again, there are many volumes which contain various styles of what appears to have been his earlier writing, and which correspond remarkably with his early manuscript collections (for example see No. 1219 and 4628).

But, besides these inherent proofs, which appear on the face of the writings, a very curious corroboration, in the nature of analogy, has occurred since the compilation of the present Catalogue was commenced. The artist employed to execute the specimens of hand-writing which appear upon the plates illustrating the present volume, and who has devoted the greater part of his life to this particular branch of handicraft, after he had transcribed two or three specimens, spontaneously asked of the compilers, whether the originals had not been written by the same person. It should be observed, that this individual was not at all aware of the nature of the writings, nor of the object the compilers had in view; the thought of the writings being identical struck him, simply upon finding that when he had transcribed a few specimens, he did the remainder with greater facility, even though apparently in a different style to any of those which he had previously done. This circumstance tends to shew, that that prevailing character of pen which every person from long habits of writing must acquire, however artfully he may endeavour to disguise it upon occasions, does appear to reign throughout the productions under consideration. The testimony of this unprejudiced and unintentional witness was considered so important by the compilers, that Mr. SHELDRICK, the artist alluded to, was desired by them to communicate his opinion on the subject, which he did in the annexed note.

14, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

Gentlemen,

Since I last saw you, I have paid particular attention to the remarks you made as regards the hand-writing of MELANCTHON, and must certainly agree with you, that the whole I have had to fac-simile are evidently by the same hand, as the formation of the letters correspond with each other exactly.

I beg leave to state that, being in the habit of copying so many hundred different styles of writing, I am generally enabled to discover any fictitious copy sooner than one unaccustomed to fac-similes.

Your obedient servant,

Friday Afternoon. WM. SHELDRICK.

Before concluding the present notice, a few remarks relative to the history of the collection may be not improperly introduced.

In answer to a letter written to Dr. KLOSS upon this point, he states,—

"My Library has been collected in the course of eighteen years throughout the whole of Germany, and no single old library of importance has been its foundation: but the collections of JOHN VON DALBURG, Bishop of Worms; of BERNARD ADELMAN, of Adelmansted; of the Cathedral of Eslingen, were altogether, in five different purchases, embodied almost entire in my collection. Much later, I bought many important works from the collection of CHRISTOPHER SCHEURL, of the Cathedral of Ochsenhausen; of SCHOEFFER JOH. FICHARD, &c."

In the Biographie Universelle we learn, that when REUCHLIN retired from public life, in order to avoid persecution (1495-8), he sought an asylum in the city of Heidelberg, and, enjoying the favour of JOHN DALBURG, then Bishop of Worms, found in his rich library all the assistance he could desire in the pursuit of his literary labours. JOHN DALBURG died in 1503, and in 1509 MELANCTHON went to study at Heidelberg, and there, no doubt, through the introduction of his patron REUCHLIN, was admitted to the free use of the late bishop's library, which probably still remained at Heidelberg.

It will be observed, that the manuscript notes in the early editions of the classics, and other fine books in the following Catalogue, which may have formed part of that collection, are not so copious, but more neatly written than in those books which appear to have been MELANCTHON's own property: he seems, indeed, in the former to have confined his pen to mere marginal references, which he has executed with neatness, and in most instances in imitation of the type in which the volumes were printed: for instance see No. 2006.

Finally, with regard to the books which formed MELANCTHON's own library, such as the great bulk of the classics, grammatical works, and his own manuscripts: these seem, at his death, to have fallen into the hands of his son-in-law PEUCER, who collected together and edited his theological writings. In the year 1575, PEUCER was thrown into prison on the suspicion of being the author of an obnoxious publication, and was kept in close confinement, without any communication with his friends, for the period of eleven years. On regaining his liberty, he learned that his wife had died of grief, and that all his property had been dispersed; but into whose hands it had fallen no mention is made. This circumstance, in an historical point of view, is fully sufficient to account not only for the obscurity in which MELANCTHON's books have remained up to the present period, but also for the frequent erasure of names and identifying circumstances which appear to have been made in them.

It has been a subject of frequent remark, that the published works of MELANCTHON are almost entirely confined to religious subjects, which, considering his known classical acquirements, is somewhat extraordinary. It is probable that his son-in-law, PEUCER, who edited his theological works, would, in like manner, have brought to light his various classical labours but for the reverses in his circumstances, and for the dispersion of that property which might have enabled him to do so.

BIBLIOTHECA SELECTA PALAEOTYPOGRAPHICA.

The Numerals occurring underneath the names of the printers and dates of the books refer to PANZER'S TYPOGRAPHICAL ANNALS; as, for instance, in Lot. 1, vol. vii, page 538, No. 332.
Where no numerals occur, the work may be considered as unknown to Panzer.
Where the place of printing, name of the printer, and date occur within a bracket, such work has no indication thereof, and those given, are, as far as it is possible to conjecture, presumed to be correct; and where dots are enclosed, to such works the place or printer's name cannot be assigned.

 This exceedingly rare volume may be considered UNIQUE, and a GREAT CURIOSITY, as, at the end of the last leaf is the following autograph note by the original possessor, G. Ruch.

"Anno domini 1470 emi istum libellum pro 30 grossis in sexternis et quaternis non ligatis nec rubricatis et eum aliquando labore inter gravi literas incompletas."

This volume is also in its original binding, with the following inscription in large letters impressed thereon: on the one side,

"Agustinus. in. li. bro. confession. pert^{t}. dm̄o. i. ruch."

On the other,

"Illegatus. año 1470. per me rich. en. bach. in gislingēn."

i, 67, 389

 Much controversy has arisen among bibliographers as to the priority of these editions, both of which we have carefully examined, and therefore submit the following reasons for our assigning the priority to that printed by Fust.

The editor, in his preliminary epistle, informs us that he committed the Manuscript "discreto viro Johanni fust incole maguntinensi impressorie artis mgr̄o;" and that he (John Fust), for the accommodation and use of the reader, made, with much labour, an alphabetical index, and "Duas Figuras" (vide end of his edition); and also, in addition, he placed letters in the margins, thereby forming a double reference.

The epistle of the editor in the second edition states, that the manuscript was entrusted "discreto viro Johanni mẽntelin incole argẽtinensi impressorie artis mgr̄o." The substance of the first part of the Epistle is the same as in the previous edition; but the last page differs materially; The editor, or the printer, therein alludes to the table and marginal references (printed in the previous edition), and states that he has in this book, alluding to the marginal references, placed them "intra margines:" and adds that, if any body chooses, it will be easy for him to add them also in the margins with a pen.

LOT

520 VETUS ET NOVUM TESTAMENTUM, Græcè, 5 tom. in 4
Argentorati, Wolfgang Cephalius, 1526 vi, 101, 736, &c.

 These sacred volumes cannot fail to excite the deepest feelings of reverence in the breast of every enlightened protestant: they were those that were used and read by the illustrious MELANCTHON. The New Testament contains numerous interlineations and marginal notes, apparently written during the earlier and later periods of his life; and it may be curious to observe that, on the reverse of the last leaf of the Acts of the Apostles, Melancthon has written the ten names of God, in Hebrew and Latin, which page has been covered with plain paper by the person to whom the volumes afterwards passed.

521 BIBLIA LATINA
Ed. prima Frobenii
Basileæ, Joh. Froben de Hammelburg, 1491
i, 170, 136

522 — Ed. ii ib. ib. 1495
i, 178, 192

 Middleton, in his Biographia Evangelica, informs us that,

"Reuchlin made (Melancthon) a present of a copy of the bible which John Frobenius had printed at Basil, in a small volume. Melancthon always carried this bible about him, and chiefly when he went to church, where those who saw him hold it in his hands during divine service, believed he was reading quite another thing than what the time and place required of him, because it was much larger than a prayer-book; and those that envied him took occasion from hence to make him odious with others."

We have no hesitation in stating, that this is THE IDENTICAL COPY OF THIS SACRED VOLUME, WHICH REUCHLIN GAVE TO HIS PUPIL, MELANCTHON. The earliness of the writing on the upper part of the title-page fully warrants this assertion. It also contains marginal notes.

No PROTESTANT CAN BEHOLD THIS VOLUME WITHOUT FEELINGS OF THE HIGHEST VENERATION. IT MAY BE TRULY SAID TO HAVE SOWN THE FIRST SEEDS OF THE PROTESTANT RELIGION IN THE BREAST OF THIS ILLUSTRIOUS MAN, AND OF HAVING BEEN THE INSTRUMENT OF THAT CONDUCT HE AFTERWARDS PURSUED IN BRINGING ABOUT THE REFORMATION OF THE CHURCH.

 We have before noticed the singular circumstance occurring in very many of the books that have belonged to Melancthon, namely, the erasure of all writings and names that might have tended to disclose their having been the property of one whose works had been condemned as heretical.

We have, however, in the PRESENT VOLUME, the ONLY INSTANCE IN WHICH we have discovered HIS AUTOGRAPH. It occurs at the bottom of page 6; having, from its situation, and also from being abridged, escaped the researches of those who may have had the examination of the library.

As the note is on a subject of much interest, and one somewhnt illustrative of the mild nature and character of Melancthon, we have had the passage alluded to and the note copied: see fac-simile.

693 BIBLIA:—SACRÆ SCRIPTURÆ VETERIS, NOVÆQUE, OMNIA, Græcè

694 BIBLIA LATINA, 2 tom.

MOGUNTIÆ, JOHANNES FUST, ET PETRUS SCHOEFFER, 1462

ii, 114, 6

 THE FIRST EDITION OF THE BIBLE IN LATIN, WITH A DATE.

695 BIBLIA LATINA (Argentorati, Henricus Eggesteyn, 1469-70)

i, 80, 437

 There are two editions of this Bible printed with the same type. The present copy accords with the one described in Le Long Bib. Sacra, part ii, vol. iii, p. 73, sect. xiii. Printed on 493 leaves, in double columns, 45 lines in a full page.

696 BIBLIA LATINA

Ed. Zellii posterior (Coloniæ, Ulricus Zell, 147$\frac{6}{7}$)

 There appears to have been considerable indistinction among bibliographers in the indication of the editions of this Bible.

The copies, mentioned by Panzer, i, 327, 388; Le Long, Biblioth. Sacra, v. 3, p. 71; Daunou Analyse, &c., p. 24, note; we conclude, all wanted the "Tabulæ," and were the first editions. The copy here described was formerly the property of Dr. Kloss, but is now in the possession of Henry Perkins, Esq.

The copy in the possession of His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex is incorrectly described in the "Bibliotheca Sussexiana" as to the number of leaves; arising, we infer, from an error in the press, and overlooked by the learned bibliographer: we conclude, therefore, there are but two editions printed by Zell, both of which, here described, are equally printed on 679 leaves, in double columns, with 42 lines in each; volume first on 345 and volume second on 334 leaves, independent of the "Tabulæ" of 28 leaves (10 to the first and 18 to the second volume) found in the first volume of the present copy.

The difference in the composing of the texts of the two editions are evident in every page, and the contractions are nearly equal, although they do not occur in the same words; thus making the lines generally to correspond.

As there are some unaccountable singularities in the first edition, and errors in both, the following abridged collation may not be unacceptable to the bibliographer, and serve more distinctly in future to designate the two editions:—

FIRST EDITION.	SECOND EDITION.
(FORMERLY IN THE POSSESSION OF DR. KLOSS.)	(PRESENT COPY.)
The type of this edition is quite sharp, and apparently new. It is printed on stout and white paper.	The text of this edition is the most correct: but, the type is much worn, thickened, and printed on "coarse brown-tinted paper."

VARIATIONS.

VOLUME I.	VOLUME I.
The "Tabulæ" are wanting to both volumes.	This volume contains both the "Tabulæ."
The first two pages (of the Bible) are of unequal length, from the top line of the second edit. being the last of the first col. of the present one, viz.
Fol. 1, col. 1, line 43, "buit ılla etas in auditū oīb⁹ secu."	Fol. 1, Col. 2, line 1, "buit ılla etas in auditū oīb⁹ secu."
Col. 2, line 42, "reret aut cucurrisset Habz nescio."	Line 42, "ret aut cucurrisset. Habet nescio."
LIBER NUMERI
Chapter 26, verses 17 and 18, the second line is omitted, viz.
Fol. 82, col. 2, line 2, "arihe litaɥ Iste sūt fāilie gad qrū."	Fol. 82, col. 2, recto, L. 1. "lia aroditarū . arihel ab hoc faīlia" 2. "arihe litaɥ Iste sūt fāilie gad qrū."
This volume ends on folio 345 (independent of any Tabula).	The same.
—— Recto, line 32, "spiritus laudet dūm . All'a Explicit psalterium."	Lin. 32. "spūs laudet dūm. Alleluia Explicit psalteriū."
VOLUME II.	VOLUME II.
The chapters of this edition are not designated until the 32d chapter of Isaiah.	The chapters are designated throughout the volume.
LIBER SAPIENTIÆ.	THE SAME.
Fol. 18, col. 1, recto, "Explicit prologus. Incip . li ecclesiastic⁹."	The same. "Expliciūt cātica cāticoɥ. Incip . li . sapīe. Ca-primū."
Fol. 25, col. 1, verso L. 39. "ni loco assistēs eis. Explicit liber sapientie. Inci pit plogus ih'u filii syrach in librū ecclesiasticū."	L. 37, "loco assistens eis. Explicit liber sapīe. Inci pit plog⁹ ihesu filii syrach in libɥ ecclesiasticum."
Fol. 25, col. 2, verso, Line 41. "sed'z legē dūi pposuerīt vitā ag'e." "Expliciūt cātica cāticoɥ."	The same. Line 41. "posuerint vitam agere." "Explicit prologus."
Then follows on the recto of the next leaf, (LIBER ECCLESIASTICUS). "Incipit liber sapiēie."	The same, (LIBER ECCLESIASTICUS). "Incipit li . eccīastic⁹. Ca.i."

FIRST EDITION.	SECOND EDITION.
LIBER DANIELIS.	THE SAME.
Daniel concludes on the recto of folio 147, col. 2,	The same
L. 31. "to corā eo. Explicit daīel pphe."	Line 29. "ti sūt in momēto corā eo."

We have no paginal difference in these editions until we arrive at the fourteen chapter of St. Luke (folio 238, col. 1, recto; which difference is continued to folio 252, col. 2, recto; 14 leaves), after which they again continue paginal to the end.

Fol. 238, col. 1, recto,	The same.
Line 41.	Line 42.
"ꝓ uxorēs ꝓ filios ꝓ fratres ꝓ soro'es"	"ꝓ uxorez ꝓ filios ꝓ frēs ꝓ sorores"
L. 42. "adhuc aūt ꝓ aīam suā nō potest."
Col. 2 recto	The same
Chap. xv has 18 lines in col. 2	Chap. xv has 16 lines in col. 2
Fol. 239 verso	Fol. 239, verso.
has only 24 lines, divided in two columns of 12 each: the rest of the leaf is blank. The last line in col. 2 is only a part of the 10*th verse* of the 17th chapter (which is continued in the following page), viz.	NOTE. This unaccountable error is in this edition rectified.
Col. 2, line 12.	Line 32, 33, col. 1, verso,
"sūt vob' dicite s'ui inutiles sumus."	"ta sunt vobis dicite servi inutiles sumus. Quod debuim⁹ facere feci"
Fol. 240, col. 1, recto
L. 1. "Quod debuim⁹ facere fecimus Et."
APOCALYPSIS	THE SAME.
Ends on folio 335, col. 2, recto
Line 31. -"omnib⁹ vobis amen."	Line 31. "xpi cum ōnib⁹ vobis amen."
"Explicit liber apocalipsis beati Johannis apostoli."	"Explicit liber apocalipsis beati Johannis apostoli."

 WE ARE UTTERLY INCAPABLE OF GIVING AN ADEQUATE DESCRIPTION OF THIS MOST EXTRAORDINARY VOLUME, WHICH MAY BE TRULY LOOKED UPON AS THE HIGHEST MONUMENT OF THE OVERWHELMING LEARNING AND PIOUS INDUSTRY OF MELANCTHON.
THE MARGINS OF MANY PORTIONS OF THE VOLUME, AND MORE PARTICULARLY THOSE IN THE NEW TESTAMENT, ARE LITERALLY FILLED WITH COMMENTARIES, EMENDATIONS, AND INTERLINEATIONS.
The Notes, with the exception of those occurring in the Book of Psalms, are all written in the same style; Melancthon having throughout his labours attended, as he often did, to the peculiar character of the type in which the volume was printed. Hence it may be observed that his Capital Letters correspond generally, and in some instances, where the writing is larger, he has imitated the text [vide fac-similes]. The notes are also written in a somewhat heavier hand than usual, but this circumstance may be accounted for by the peculiarity, roughness, and porous nature of the paper with which the volume is printed.
The notes occurring in the Book of Psalms, and occasionally in other parts of the volume, are in Latin and German, and are written in a somewhat similar style in which Melancthon occasionally wrote his German hand.
WE MAY FAIRLY CONCLUDE, PARTICULARLY JUDGING FROM THE NOTE OCCURRING AT THE END OF THE VOLUME, THAT MELANCTHON WROTE THIS PORTION IN THIS DIFFERENT HAND, WITH THE VIEW OF HOPING THAT, IN THE EVENT OF RELIGIOUS CONTENTIONS OCCURRING, THIS, HIS BELOVED VOLUME AND MONUMENT OF HIS THEOLOGICAL LABOURS, MIGHT BE RESCUED FROM THE REVENGEFUL AND DESTRUCTIVE HANDS OF HIS PERSECUTING ENEMIES.

EDITIONS OF THE BIBLE

CONTAINING

MANUSCRIPT ANNOTATIONS FROM THE PEN OF MELANCTHON,

WERE DISCOVERED IN THE LIBRARY OF THE LATE ALEX. CHALMERS, Esq.

755*Biblia Sacra ad Hebraicam Veritatem restituta
8vo, Basileæ, apud Nicolaum Bryling, 1557

 The discovery of this volume at this particular moment is not only somewhat singular, but very important in the illustration of the Writings of Melancthon. It proves to us, that even at this late period of his life (1557), Melancthon still retained the power of writing thus so beautifully, and in so minute a character, as is seen by the annexed fac-simile, No. 1.

It is a most curious circumstance, that this volume, which is literally filled with Manuscript Annotations, should not have been before discovered; for the style of writing in which most of the notes are executed agrees precisely with that which has been generally known as Melancthon's.

There is another point to be observed, and which satisfactorily proves the early dispersion of Melancthon's library, and that some of his books had reached this country at an early period, for at the end of the volume occurs the following name: "Richard Dart, his book, ye 5th Day of January, 1707."

755Biblia, cum pleno apparatu summarium Concordantiarum folio, Basileæ, Joh. Froben, 1514

 This volume is equally interesting as the previous one; for the character in which the annotations illustrating the text are written tends much to corroborate that peculiar style occurring in the Book of Psalms in the edition of the Bible, No. 710. The character, however, of the writings in the present volume is the same throughout, only that some portion of it is written more carelessly than the other.

It may also be observed, that the name, probably of Melancthon, has been most carefully erased from the title.

Ed. princeps Nicolaus Jenson, 1470
iii, 69, 22

 An exceedingly pure and highly illuminated copy of this very rare volume, which Dr. Kloss considers to have preceded the edition printed by Sweynheym and Pannartz, so fully described in the Bibliotheca Spenceriana, vol. i, p. 341, where even Dr. Dibdin, after quoting the authorities of Count Reviekzy and others, states, that though this edition is from a different MS., "the proof of its priority, in order of publication, is not quite decisive."

1198 — Libri de Natura Deorum, de Divinatione, de Fato, de Legibus—Academiarum Quæstionum—Modestus de Disciplina Militari et M. T. C. Ciceronis vita ex dictis Plutarchi

Ed. ii Venetiis, Vindolinus de Spira, 1471
iii, 72, 33

 A beautiful copy of this very rare edition, with illuminations.

ED. PRINCEPS MOGUNT., JOH. FUST. ET P. SCHOEFFER, 1465

 Regarding the priority of this celebrated edition to that printed by Ulric Zell much controversy has, among bibliographers, arisen. Dr. Kloss places it, without hesitation, as the first, therein agreeing with the original and maintained opinion of Dr. Dibdin, vide Bibliotheca Spenceriana, vol. i, pp. 304 to 310, wherein a minute account of both editions will be found.
The present copy has the leaf at the end, containing the Ode of Horace, which is wanting in some copies.

1209 — OFFICIORUM L. III, Paradoxa—Lælius, sive de Amicitia —Cato Major, sive de Senectute, Versus XII, de Sapient.

1287 DONATUS de Octo Partibus Orationis
Two leaves, printed on parchment, with 33 lines on each page . . . fol.

 This fragment is printed with the same type as was used for the commonly called the "Mazarine" Bible, said to be printed by Guttenberg, in 1450 and 1455.

The "Littera Indulgentiæ" of Pope Nicolas V, in 1454, now in possession of Earl Spencer, contains two lines printed with the same type.

This singular circumstance, which has hitherto escaped the researches of all bibliographers, was first discovered and kindly mentioned to us by George Appleyard, Esq., his Lordship's Librarian.

1288 — Two Leaves, on parchment, printed from wood blocks, 35 lines on each page . fol.

 The letter with which this is printed bears the same character with the type used by Pfister for his Latin Bible, 1461 and 1462.

1289 — Three Fragments, on parchment
Printed at Bamberg, by Pfister, fol.

1290 — Nine Leaves, on parchment, with the same type as his Bible of 1460-2 ib. ib. ib. fol.

1291 — Four Leaves, on parchment, with 27 lines on each page 4to

 Dr. Kloss considers the above as the first edition printed by Koster, at Harlem.

1292 — One Leaf, a fragment, on parchment, of the second edition, 27 lines on a page . 4to

1293 — Two Leaves, on parchment, of the third edition, 27 lines on a page . . 4to

1294 — One Leaf, on parchment, of the fourth edition, 27 lines on a page . . 4to

1295 — Three Fragments, on parchment

 These are printed with the same type as the fragment of the "Catonis Disticha," in the library of Earl Spencer, and corresponding with that used in the first edition, called second, of the Dutch Speculum, printed at Harlem.

1296 — Four Leaves, on parchment, 30 lines in a page (Antwerpiæ, Henricus Eckert de Homborch), 4to

1297 — One Leaf and a Fragment, on parchment, 30 lines in a page (ib. ib. ib.) 4to

 The fragment is of a different edition.

1298 — Three Fragments, the one on parchment, in a large missal type, the other two on paper, in the type of Frid. Creussner of Nuremberg . 4to 1299 — One Leaf, on paper, 30 lines in a page, in a missal type, supposed to have been printed at Basle fol.

1300 — Two Leaves, printed on paper, from wood-blocks, in a large type, with the following colophon:

"Octo parcium oracionis, donatus, per cũnradum,
dinckmŭt Vlmẽsis Oppidi.
Civem impressus finit felicit." fol.

1301 DONATUS DE OCTO PARTIBUS ORATIONIS
(Augustæ Vindeliorum, Gunther Zainer, 147$\frac{0}{2}$)

 An exceedingly fine copy of this excessively rare edition, which is not mentioned by any bibliographer. It is printed with a large type, and consists of 17 leaves, with 35 lines in a page.

1302 — Ed. altera, cum Versione Germanica interlin.
(Argentorati, Henricus Knoblotzer, 148$\frac{0}{2}$)

 An exceedingly rare and undescribed edition.

1303 — A LARGE COLLECTION OF FRAGMENTS OF VARIOUS MANUSCRIPT AND PRINTED DONATUSSES, in two portfolios

1315 DURANDI (GULIELMI) RATIONALE DIVINORUM
ED. PRINCEPS MOGUNTIÆ, JOHANNES FUST et PETRUS SCHOEFFER, 1459

 A MAGNIFICENT VOLUME, PRINTED UPON VELLUM; which may be considered the most curious and extraordinary specimen of ancient printing. It is the third book which appeared bearing a date.

The present copy is in the highest state of preservation, but unfortunately wants 32 leaves at the end.

 PRINTED ON VELLUM, and contains numerous miniatures, highly illuminated.

1339 HEURES DE NOTRE DAME A L'USAGE DE ROME
Paris, Germain Hardouyn (152$\frac{3}{4}$)

 PRINTED ON VELLUM. This little volume contains fourteen miniature paintings, and was a presentation copy from Gaspar Sitnihr to Ferdinand IV, Archduke of Austria, 1583; with his coat of arms painted on the fly leaf.

1340 Heures a l'Usage de Rome
Paris, chez Germ. Hardouyn (152¾)

 Printed on vellum. This volume formerly belonged to Philip de Villers, of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem; it then appears to have passed into the hands of Joh. de la Riviere and Mariæ de Roncherolles, whose arms are painted on the fly leaf. It has, further, a prayer in Latin at the commencement, in a hand very similar to that of Melancthon's; and, from the MS. occurring on the last leaf, it may fairly be presumed to be by him.

1341 Horæ in Laudem B. Virginis secundem consuetudinem Romanæ Curiæ—Septem Psalmi pœnitentiales, &c. &c. edente Philippo (Melancthone) Brettano
Haganoæ, Th. Anshelmus, 1518
vii, 85, 147

 Melancthon's copy, as appears from the writing, in Greek, on the reverse of the last leaf. In editing this volume Melancthon assumed the name of Brettanus, from the place of his birth, Bretten.

1342 Horæ ad usum Romanæ Curiæ
(Parisiis, Ant. Verard, 1488)

 Printed on vellum, and containing fifteen large engravings, with the initial letters in gold and colours, the text being enclosed by engraved borders.

1366 Breviarium Rastisponiense, Pars Hyemalis et Æstivalis, 2 tom. very rare (Eustadi, Georg. [Reiser] de Spira, 1479)

 Henry, Bishop of Ratisbon, published in 1480 a decree, wherein he states that, on account of a petition received from the printer of this publication, 400 copies had been purchased of him (George of Spira) at three florins per copy; and that these said copies are now brought into the city; and further recommends all to purchase the work.
A MS. copy of the decree is inserted in the first volume.

1367 Breviarium secundum Consuetudinum Romanæ Curiæ
Venetiis, Jacobus Rubeus, Gallicus, 1474
iii, 105, 170

 It is a question whether this or the Breviary, published in the same year, at Turin, is the first edition.

The present copy is very much wormed, but exceedingly curious, as containing at the end the following note :—"Iste liber pertinet Johanni Stol impressori, qui deposuit illum apud nos in caritate." It also has on the fly-leaf, on vellum, the autograph of Stol, with his monogram.

 In the third volume of the "Annales des Alde," these three editions (Nos. 1436, 1438, and 1439), are mentioned at page 322-3, where Renouard terms them "Extremement Rares." It needed scarcely his long dissertation to prove that they were not from the Aldine Press; the severity of the satire was sufficient to convince any one that no Italian printer, and more particularly no one who sought to protect his editions by the Papal privilege, as Aldus did, would have countenanced the promulgation of a work, the object of which was to place Romanism in the most ridiculous light.

Paul Jovius attributes these Letters to Reuchlin,—"The book was greedily bought up," he continues, "and by its publication so mortified the malicious slanderers. that, boiling with rage, the Monks obtained, by their humble application to Leo, an order against the sale and impression of it. Reuchlin, however, eluded the prohibition by an ingenious artifice, giving a second volume to the press more severe than the former, under a name not included in the prohibition" (see Nos. 1440 and 1441).

These volumes have also been ascribed to Ulric ab Hutten (see Thomasius, in the Preface to Paul Manutius's Letters).

It is said that Erasmus laughed so heartily on reading one of these letters, that he broke an imposthume of which he lay dangerously ill, and, in consequence, recovered. Bayle, however, says that Erasmus disapproved of them; and he quotes the letter attributed to Erasmus, contained in the Lamentationes, in confirmation. In that letter Erasmus terms the Epistolæ, "compositæ lite Reuchlinicae."

1472 PAULUS IV, P.M.—Copia litterarū Apostolicarum de publicatione Anni Jobilei incarnacionis dominice, Mcccclxxv. Datum Rome apd'sanctum petrum. Anno incarnacionis dominice Millesimoquadrīgentesimo septuagesimo Tercio decimo, k. maii. Pontificatus nrī Anno sexto

4to (Coloniæ, Joh. Veldener)

ii, 550, 871

 This Bull, consisting of six leaves, with twenty-five lines in a full page, is rendered an important historical document, as it has been a doubtful point among historians, whether it was Pope Paulus II, or Sixtus IV, who reduced the Jubilee of Rome to every twenty-five years. A Jubilee was certainly held by P. Sixtus IV, in 1475; but it appears by this rare production, that the appointed time emanated from Paulus II, fifteen months before he died.

PUBLICATIONES ET INSTRUCTIONES CURIOSÆ.

1509 A Decree against certain Jews in Worms for Contumacy, with sentence of excommunication, interdiction, &c., and a long recital about the validity of certain jurisdictions, with the causes tried therein

1510 A Thesis on Leprosy, in which the disease and treatment are rationally described as far as it goes; Instructions for Practitioners in the Medical Art, with certain Secrets, "try (ad probandum), and you see wonders"

1511 A Moral and Religious Memento, in Verse, a woodcut, see monogram ✠ B. R.S.

1512 A Discreet Admonition by the Town Council against taking alloyed gold, offered by weight, at Frankfert fair; Regulations of the same, for the sale of Wine and Beer at the fair

1513 Instructions to the Clergy for Winter Service, perhaps both at Spires; a figure visibly expressing the mystery of the Eucharist, and how Christ is contained in the Sacrament, three pieces

1514 Part of a Psalter, which has much the appearance of block-printing. It may, however, be observed, the Q is the G reversed; likewise that these letters were not originally printed with the book, but kept out to be printed in red: the broken A is in favour of this opinion, because it occurs in two pages following each other; we are therefore to suppose, that the printer had but one letter, and besides this, the capitals are all out of line

1515 Twenty Fragments, of early printed Books, on paper and vellum

1516 Two Leaves of the Catholicon of 1460, on vellum; and one Leaf (an Index of Contents), printed by Caxton

1739* Fasciculus Temporum (à Wernero Rolevinck)
Ed. omnium prima, bad copy
Coloniæ, Arnoldus Ther Hoernen, 1474
i, 277, 19

 The work is preceded by a "Tabula" of eight leaves, and the reverse of the Colophon is blank.

1740 FASCICULUS TEMPORUM (à Johanne de Laer)
ED. PRINCEPS ET UNICA
Coloniæ, Nicolaus de Sletzstad, 1474
iv, 279, 4596

 This edition is said, by Dr. Kloss, to be written by Johan. de Laer; upon what authority we know not: it is by far the RAREST of all the "Fasciculus Temporum." And we know but of one other copy existing, being that in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

Although published the same year as the preceding Ed., it has, at the end, an account of the splendid reception and entertainment of the Emperor Frederic III, and his Son Maximilian, by Charles, Duke of Burgundy, at Treves, previous to the marriage of Maximilian to Mary, his daughter.

1741 FASCICULUS TEMPORUM (à Wernero Rolevinck)
ED. OMNIUM PRIMA Arnoldus Ther Hoernen, 1474
i, 277, 19

 This is the same impression as Number 1739*, but the Tabula has been reprinted, and extended to ten leaves; and on the reverse of the Colophon is printed the account of the reception of Frederic and his Son by the Duke of Burgundy, at Treves; as well as the death of the latter at the Battle of Nancy, which did not take place till 1477, three years after the first publication; thus evincing the slow progress of the sale of the work.

1742 Fasciculus Temporum
Ed. ii Lovanii, Johannes Veldener, 1476
i, 512, 11

1743 — Ed. iii Coloniæ, Conradus de Homborch, 1476
i, 280, 38

1744 — Ed. iv, very rare Spiræ, Petrus Drach, 1477
iii, 18, 5

 This edition is a reprint of the first, and is the first book printed at Spira bearing the name of the printer.

1745 — Ed. v Coloniw, Nicolaus Gotz de Stetstadt, 1478
i, 283, 57

 This edition is a reprint from the third, with additions on the last leaf.

1746 — Ed. vi Coloniæ, Henr. Quentell, 1479
i, 285, 70

 A reprint of the former edition.

1747 — Ed. vii Venetiis, Georgius Walch, 1479
iii, 149, 410

1748 — Ed. ix Venetiis, Ehrhard Ratdolt, 1480
iii, 156, 444

 This edition contains matter not in the previous or later ones. MELANCTHON'S COPY, with marginal notes.

1749 — Ed. x (Argentorati, Joh. Gruninger, 148$\frac{0}{1}$)

 This is a reprint of the third; but contains, on the last leaf, an account of circumstances at Treviris, before 1477, omitted in all other editions.

1750 — Ed. xii Coloniæ, Henr. Quentell, 1481
i, 289, 97

1751 — Ed. xiv (Ulmæ, Johannes Zainer?) 1481
iv, 26, 177

 This contains the additions of Henry Wirzeburg de Vach, and is the first of the many subsequent editions; and has marginal notes, somewhat in the style of the type, and apparently by MELANCTHON.

1752 — Ed. xv Basileæ, Bernardus Richelius, 1482
i, 154, 41

1753 — Ed. xvi Memmingæ, Albertus Kunne, 1482

1840 HOMERI ILIAS ET ODYSSEA, Græcè, 2 tom.
Ed. ii, prima Aldina (Venetiis, Aldus, 1502)
vii, 371, 360
 MELANCTHON'S COPY, with numerous marginal notes in the first volume, very neatly written.

These volumes are of the highest interest, as we learn that Melancthon, during the first year of his residence at Wittemberg, being then only twenty-two years of age, gave public lectures to crowded auditories upon the works of Homer.

It is curious to observe that, in the first volume many of the leaves have been deprived of the lower margins; and if we may judge from the manuscript note occurring on the second leaf, that portion cut away contained biographical and other matter relating to Melancthon.

ED. PRINCEPS ROMÆ IN DOMO PETRI DE MAXIMIS (CONR. SWEYNHEIM ET ARNOLD. PANNARTZ), 1468
ii, 409, 10

 THESE MAGNIFICENT VOLUMES, WHICH MAY HAVE BELONGED TO JOHN DALBURG, BISHOP OF WORMS, HAVE EVIDENTLY PASSED THROUGH THE HANDS OF THE ILLUSTRIOUS MELANCTHON.

They contain marginal notes in red and black ink, written in imitation of the type in which the work is printed, being that of the Roman character.

The first page of text to each volume is illuminated, and in the execution of which a curious coincidence is to be observed; namely, that the outlining of the illuminations is executed with the very identical ink as used in the writing of the notes, which, we think, goes far to prove their having been done by the same hand; the colouring of the pages may have been executed by another person; though there is no reason why they may not have been done by Melancthon, who, no doubt, learned much from his kind friend and patron Reuchlin. and, as is seen by his illustrations in the works of Ovid, was fully capable of the performance.

It is also exceedingly curious to observe, that the lower portion of the illumination in the second volume has been cut off, and which, no doubt, contained matter illustrative of the party to whom the volumes had belonged. In each volume some little similar MS. has been carefully erased.

Ed. prima
Romæ, Conr. Sweynheym et Arnold. Pannartz, 1471-2
ii, 426, 62, &c. &c.

 From the circumstances connected with the publication of these "portentous" volumes, they will ever remain as one of the greatest bibliographical curiosities.

They contain an epistle from the Editor to the Pope, therein enumerating the various publications of these distinguished printers, and stating that, unless relieved by Papal Munificence, they would be utterly ruined by the production of these volumes.

The list of the publication states there were only two hundred and twenty copies of this work printed.

The present copy has the initial letters illuminated throughout; and, with the exception of wanting a part of one leaf, and two or three others stained, is in a fine state.

 THE SECOND AND THIRD VOLUMES OF THIS EDITION (MORE PARTICULARLY THE THIRD) CONTAIN NUMEROUS MARGINAL NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIVE DRAWINGS, THEREIN DISPLAYING THE VERSATILE TALENT OF MELANCTHON.

THE DRAWINGS ARE, FOR THE MOST PART, EXECUTED IN PEN AND INK; MANY OF THEM EXHIBITING MUCH TASTE IN THEIR DELINEATION, AND OTHERS NOT WANTING IN SINGULARITY AND DROLLERY OF CONCEPTION.

On the reverse of the fly leaf to the third volume, Melancthon has written,

"Annotationes in P. Ovidii Nasonis fastorum libros Per Osualdum ab Egk ex M. Sebastiani Lincii prælectione collectæ."

On reference to Joecher's Lexicon, we learn that Oswald von Eck (Egk) was the editor of "Gaulteri de Castellione Alexandreidos libr. x, cum notis Seb. Linckii, zu Ingoldstadt, 1541."

In the same volume we find that Sebastian Linck was a Theologian, Rhetorician, and Poet; and that, in 1535, he was Professor of Rhetoric at Ingolstadt. He was the author of an Epithalamium on the marriage of Osnald von Egk, at Ingolstadt, in 1544.

On consulting Dr. Cox's Life of Melancthon, we are informed that, in the early part of the year 1539, Melancthon accompanied his Prince to a Protestant Conference at Franckfort; after which, in 1540, he attended the Diet at Hagenau; from thence the Diet was appointed to meet at Worms, to which place he repaired.

The Conference here opened early in January 1541, but, on the third day, an order came from the Emperor to suspend the proceedings, and to meet him in person at a Diet appointed at Ratisbon.

Melancthon accordingly proceeded to Ratisbon, where his presence was probably hailed with welcome by all the learned men of that and the surrounding towns; Oswald von Egk being a classical man, and then living at Ingolstadt, a neighbouring town, was, perhaps, one of the first to welcome his arrival, and to press him to visit Ingolstadt; he would, of course, show to Melancthon the Annotations in these books of Ovid, which he had collected from the Lectures given by his friend, Sebastian Linck; and Melancthon, never losing an opportunity of obtaining information, would naturally insert them in addition to his own observations.

These remarks are certainly conjectural; but, as circumstantial evidence tends much to prove a fact, it does, in the present instance, fully bear out the occasion of the following memorandum, occurring at the end of the Fasti.

"Finitus ultimus hic P. Ovidii Nasonis fastorum liber, Ingolstadii die 7 Februarii Anno MDXXXXI."

In each of the volumes Melancthon has written the name of "theodorici depleningen," to whom, no doubt, they previously belonged. In the second volume the name is thus written—"Iste liber ovidii est theodorici depleningen equitis aurati et legum professoris."

The second and third volumes also contain the following memoranda:—"Vertrau—v. Egk;" the one dated 1545, and the other 1548. It is, therefore, most probable, that at these periods Melancthon lent or entrusted the volumes to Oswald von Egk.

2909 — METAMORPHOSEON, L. XV
(ROSTOCHII, APUD FRATRES HORTUS VIRIDIS, 1476)

 THIS IS ONE OF THE RAREST OF ALL THE VARIOUS EDITIONS OF THIS PORTION OF THE WORKS OF OVID.

The Rev. Mr. Cotton, in his Typographical Gazetteer, states that the edition of Lactantius with the date 1476, was the earliest book printed at Rostock; and at which year Dr. Kloss has placed the present volume, which is printed ia double columns, having forty-three lines in each.

The volume thus ends, on the second column on the recto of the last leaf:—

Publii Ouidii Nasonis Metamorphoses
Libri Quinti Decimi Atque Vltimi . Finis.
Orba parēte suo quicunq. volumina tangis
His saltem uestra detur in urbe locus.
Quo magis faueas, nō sūt hec edita ab illo
Sed quasi de domim funere rapta sui.
Quicquid in his igit uicii rude carmē habebit
Emendaturas si licuisset eram.

The present copy, though otherwise in the finest state, apparently wants a leaf or two at the end.

 MELANCTHON'S COPY, containing numerous interlineations in the first four books, and marginal notes throughout.

Many of the interlineary notes in this edition correspond with those in the edition of 1509, and others; though at the end of the table of contents, at the commencement of the work, the following MS. note occurs:—"Theo. Gall Compo fuit."

Ed. prima, exceedingly rare
Venetiis, Ehrhard Ratdolt, 1482
iii, 178, 592

 Dr. Dibdin, in giving a copious account of this very curious work, which is illustrated with numerous wood-engravings, appears to have doubted the authority of Panzer as to the existence of this edition; and accordingly places the edition of 1485 as the first. On reference to Panzer, we find he gives as full an account of this edition as he usually does of all works; and cites several authorities; but, certainly, not stating that such authorities had imperfectly described the work.

 This volume is particularly interesting in the Annals of Bibliography, as proving that the art of printing existed at Treves in 1481.
The earliest book hitherto known, and only supposed to have been there printed, is dated 1517; but the Rev. Mr. Cotton, in his Typographical Gazetteer, states, that the earliest he had seen was dated 1583, thus making, if that in 1517 was not printed at Treves, the difference of above a whole century.

SPECULUM DOCTRINALE, 2 vol. in 1
sine ullâ notâ, cum litterâ R

Printed, also, with 67 lines in a full page, on 403 leaves, and ends on col. 2d, recto.
Line 60.—" & altus in quo & agnus ambulet et elephas natet."

 The whole of the foregoing volumes are printed with the same fount of letters. The "SPECULUM NATURALE" without the singular letter R; the "HISTORIALE" and "DOCTRINALE" with the R.

The two dateless editions of the "CATHOLICON," printed with the same type, exhibit precisely the same circumstance, the edition of 65 lines without the R, and that with 67 (as in the above works) printed with the R. Some bibliographers attribute the edition (without the R) to FUST, and prior to that bearing the date of 1460.

It is now apparent that there exists two distinct and entire editions of the "HISTORIALE," and that they were coetaneous, being printed on the same paper, with the same water-marks, and, consequently, from the same factory; the one edition with Mentellin's name to each volume, and the other without a printer's name, in which latter the singular letter R appears.

This anonymous printer, in whose productions this singularly formed type is introduced, hitherto remains in obscurity: it has generally been attributed to Mentellin; but, as yet, no bibliographer has discovered this letter R in any of his own acknowledged works; and there is little doubt, on minute inspection, that these editions were by different printers.

It seldom falls to the lot of an individual to be able to compare such rare volumes of early printing; hence arises the uncertainty of description of such works among bibliographers:—we may, therefore, be pardoned, in the present instance, for entering more largely into the minutiæ of THESE EXTRAORDINARY VOLUMES than is usually allowed, or is even desirable, in a Sale Catalogue.

Panzer, and most other bibliographers, seem to have been unacquainted with the above editions. Schoepflin, indeed, appears (p. 48) to have possessed a copy of the "HISTORIALE" solely; but enters into no detail. Santander, also, mentions the works of "Vincentius," without observation; and dismisses them as of little value.

We believe it will be found, that the copies of the "HISTORIALE" (which is that portion of the work of Vincentius usually met with in this country) are not unfrequently composed of both these editions; some volumes bearing Mentellin's name, and others without it.

The copy now in the Bodleian Library, at Oxford (from the munificent bequest of the late Francis Douce, Esq.) is made up with the first volume, printed by Mentellin, and the three last with the above-mentioned letter R edition; the type of which is smaller and more Gothic than that of Mentellin's, gaining 1 line in 30, or 2 lines in 60, of his acknowledged type.

This distinguishable letter R, which has caused so much conjecture among learned bibliographers, appears to have originated with the celebrated MASO FINIGUERRA, (as seen by the fac-simile) who engraved, in 1452, the renowned "PAX OF THE ASSUMPTION OF THE VIRGIN," for the Monks of the Church of St. Giovanni, at Florence.

Trithemius, in his "Historia Breviarum," states, that this very year "Fust perfected this art (printing), by the help of God and Peter Schoeffer, of Gernshiem," (his then servant); and that they "kept this art secret, taking an oath of all their workmen and servants, not to divulge it in any manner whatsoever."

Was Finiguerra induced to quit Florence, and enter into the service of Fust or Mentellin, as one of their secret workmen? or did Finiguerra become the unknown printer, as Dr. Dibdin designates him?—We are inclined to the latter opinion, and that he possibly printed, at an early period, the bible commonly called the R Bible, under the auspices of the Pope; as there are in this collection (No. 1494) two Bulls, published by Pope Sixtus IV, dated Rome, 1478, printed with the same fount of letters.

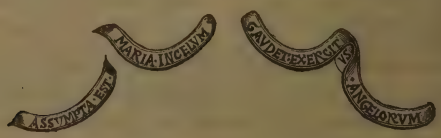
Finiguerra, Fust, Mentellin, Dunne who was employed by Guttenberg for the three years, and, lastly, Cenninus of Florence, were all either "chrysographi," illuminators; "chalcographi," engravers on metal; or "goltshribers," goldsmiths.

Fust, Mentellin, and Cenninus, became printers; and as it is acknowledged by Vasari, Zani, and lastly by Mr. Ottley, that they can give no satisfactory account of Finiguerra, may not one of the above circumstances account for the entire absence of Finiguerra from Florence?



The above fac-simile was kindly traced, at our request, by William James Smith, Esq. from the SULPHUR IMPRESSION TAKEN BY MASO FINIGUERRA, OF HIS CELEBRATED "PAX OF THE ASSUMPTION," formerly in the Seratti Collection, now in possession of his Grace the Duke of Buckingham.

3944 VINCENTII SPECULUM HISTORIALE, tom. 1 and 2, in one vol. IMPRESS. PER JOAN. MENTELLIN

 Printed with 62 lines in a full page, in double columns.

3945 — SPECULUM MORALE, 3 parts in two vol. sine ullâ notâ

 Printed with the same type as the last article, without Mentellin's name, also containing 62 lines in a full page, in double columns, on 474 leaves.

The first book concludes on fol. 210.
Col. 2d, recto.—" rectōes pcedens odiū intēdat explere.
Vincēti Belvacēsis Speculi Morales
Liber Primus finit feliciter."

The second book concludes on fol. 262, col. 1st, verso.
Line 57.—" licet non eōdem ordine prosequatur.

The third book concludes on fol. 493, col. 2d, verso.
Line 14.—" secula benedictus deus.
SPECULUM. MORALE. FINIT.

Then follows, on a single leaf, "DE VIRGINITATE," which terminates the volume on col. 2d, verso.
Folio 474.—" debemus ne perdamus."

 Whether this portion (Morale) of Vincentius's works has been printed by the R printer, is, as yet, to be discovered. Unfortunately, the present copy is much stained and damaged.

3946 — SPECULUM NATURALE, 2 vol. sine ullâ notâ

 It is a duplicate of the foregoing edition, printed without the letter R, and is much cropped.

4340 — Another edition ib. Math. Hupfuff. 1515

4341 Speculum Humanæ Salvationis:—Speghel van Menschen Behondonisse Culenborch, J. Veldener, sine anno

 This edition, which is the second from the press of Veldener, differs from those described by Panzer, v. i, p. 353, n. 2 and 3; and in the Bibliotheca Spenceriana, vol. vii, p. 186, n. 310.

The present volume is without a date, and commences (on the reverse of sig. A i, which contains only four leaves) with a cut of the crucifixion, having Veldener's device below: it also contains the prologue, and a table of contents. From b to q inclusive collates 8; but signature r has 10 leaves, the last being blank.

On the reverse of the last printed leaf is a woodcut, representing Moses exhibiting a tablet, containing the ten commandments, beneath which are the arms of "Culenburch," "Ostenriick," and "David d'bur."

The woodcuts are from the same edition, divided in the middle, as in that supposed to have been printed by Coster, at Harlem; but this edition has twelve cuts in addition, evidently executed, as Mr. Ottley observes, by another artist; the subjects of which are chiefly from the "Historia Scholastica," and is conformable to the later editions.

The type is from the same fount of letters as was used by Brito, at Bruges, and by Machlinia, at London.

The present copy wants signature n i.

4579 Ein warhastiger bericht wie es in der Kirchen Schuel und Spitall in Sant Jochimstal gehalten wirdt, 1551 fol.

 MS. upon paper. This appears to be a copy of the ceremonies as observed at this church, and approved of by MATHESIUS: see his name at the end. It may have been written by him, but this is a matter of question; it contains additions to the original rules; and the whole MS. has much the appearance of having been written by MELANCTHON, and in whose COMMON PLACE BOOK it was inserted or pasted in.

4580 Eginhardi Vita Caroli Magni L. IV 4to

 MS. upon PAPER. This belonged to the Ebner Collection (No. LXVIII). It was copied in the Monastery of "Lanckheim" (1610), by the order of Math. Fuchs, Bishop of Bamberg, from an ancient MS. upon vellum, in the Library at Heidelberg.

4581 FASCICULUS TEMPORUM ad 1470 (auctore Joh. de Laer, aut Wernero Rovelinc) . . fol.

4590 Henrici Septimolensis (Arrigo de Settimello) Liber Elegiarum de diversitate fortunæ et philosophiæ consolatione

In fine: Explicit pauper Henricus . 4to

 MS. upon PAPER, apparently written by MELANCTHON at a very early period of his life. The text is illustrated with interlineations and marginal notes.

4591 HEINRICH (BRUDER) PREDIGTEN (95) uber die Sieben Gaben des Heiligen Geistes . 1535

 M.S., upon PAPER, in excellent condition.

By the historical account which precedes the Sermons, it is stated, that Father Henry delivered them in the nunnery of Sellaren, at Nuremberg, where they were repeated by the sisters of the convent. From thence the manuscript passed to another nunnery, the convent of Saflingen, near Ulm; and the present was the last copy of it, written by five sisters of the establishment.

 We have every reason to believe that in assigning this transcript to the hand of MELANCTHON we are correct. The text of the work, and the interlineary gloss with which it is illustrated, exhibit the same peculiar character as is observed in all his other classical writings, with this exception, that the writing in this manuscript is not so well formed: but, it must be recollected, that MELANCTHON, at the period of its execution, was only eleven years of age.

4620 DE IMITATIONE CHRISTI Libri tres, &c. fol.

 The PAPER upon which this transcript is written CORRESPONDS PRECISELY with that used for the previous manuscript, both as to its WATER-MARKS and its PECULIAR TEXTURE: this circumstance, and the great similarity of the writing, go far to prove their having been executed by the same person.

4621 SENECÆ LIBER de QUATUOR VIRTUTIBUS CARDINALIBUS—Tractatus de Canone Missæ—Bernhardi Formula Honestæ Vitæ—Tituli quinque librorum Decretalium fol.

 These transcripts are written in a similar hand to that of the previous volume. The Treatise of Seneca is illustrated with interlineations and marginal notes.

4622 GASPARINI BERGOMENSIS PRÆCEPTA RHETORICIS—Ciceronis Epistolæ Nonnullæ ad Familiares 4to

 The texts of these transcripts are filled with interlineations; the whole apparently written by MELANCTHON, at an early period; the text of the first work appears to have been copied from another MS., as at the end of the first work occurs, "Explicit anno 1469, &c."

 This COLLECTION is of some little IMPORTANCE in the ILLUSTRATION of the EARLY MANUSCRIPTS of MELANCTHON. The volume exhibits no less than three or four different styles of writing, all so connected one with the other as to leave no doubt of their having been executed by the same person, thereby illustrating the previous and several of the subsequent manuscript collections.

The texts of the several works are illustrated with marginal notes and interlineations.

4626 COLLECTANEA GRAMMATICA:—Guarini Bergomensis Orthographia—Auctores varii de Modo punctandi—Donatus de Accentibus—Guarini Elegantiæ Oratoris—Guarini Præcepta—Augustinus Datus Senensis de variis loquendi Figuris & alia . . fol.

 This collection is written in a somewhat similar style as that of the last three pieces in the previous volume. Each treatise, with the exception of that by August Dathus, is illustrated with marginal notes and interlineations.

It may be also observed that this volume is written upon the VERY SAME PAPER as used in the first two volumes assigned to the hand of MELANCTHON.

4627 HIERONYMI DE VALLIBUS JHESUIDA, DE CHRISTI PASSIONE fol.

 The marginal notes to this transcript agree precisely in the style of writing with those occurring in No. 4625.

4628 COLLECTANEA:—ALANI ab INSULIS LIBER PARABOLARUM, seu Doctrinale—SENECA de Forma et Honestate Vitæ Humanæ, sive de Moribus et Virtutibus Cardinalibus—HORATII Ode Diffugere Nives—GERSONIS Distichon de Morte Humana . . fol.

 On our first seeing this volume, we were immediately struck with the conviction that it had been written by MELANCTHON, and, accordingly, had a fac-simile made as a specimen of the writing: see plate 7, No. 8.

Anxious, however, to have our opinion supported as to the period of its execution (more particularly as Dr. Kloss had assigned it to about the year 1470), we took it, together with a few earlier manuscripts upon paper, to our friend Mr. Ottley, who, after examining several of the others, on opening this volume, and seeing the ornamented initial letter on the first leaf, stated his opinion to be, that the manuscript was executed early in the sixteenth century. The identical paper-mark he was not acquainted with; but, from the texture and general appearance of the paper, he thinks it of the end of the fifteenth or the beginning of the sixteenth century.

As to the contents of the volume, which we presume to have been written about the years 1510, 1511, or 1512, each work is illustrated with commentaries and interlineations, executed in a very similar style to those occurring in the Satires of Juvenal, No. 458; in the Cicero, No. 1219; Ovid's Metamorphoses, 2919; Valerius Maximus, 3809; and in very many other volumes.

4629 COLLECTANEA:—Carmen de perfido Amatore qui tandem manus suas misere amantis Aldæ sanguine fœdavit, mœtissime conscriptum—Carmina varia—Hieronymi de Vallibus Jesuida—Tentamina artis Mnemonicæ 4to

 These transcripts exhibit the earliest specimens we find of MELANCTHON's writing in the Roman character, and in which he has made use of two distinct styles: the letter e is made, throughout the first and second pieces, with a peculiar dash, or final stroke; while the same letter, in the other portion of the volume, is written in the usual manner.

The first and third poems are illustrated with interlineary gloss.

4630 PEROTI (NICOLAI) ad Pyrrhum Nepotem de generibus Metrorum . . 4to

 This transcript exhibits the same peculiar character of writing as in the previous Number, particularly as regards the letter e; the only difference is, that the whole is more neatly executed, and in rather a larger hand.

It may be observed that the title on the first page is written in the same style of writing as that of the following manuscript.

4631 COLLECTANEA PHILOSOPHICA, &c.:—Beda de Scientia Computandi—(fol. 38) Ars ista vocatur Abacus—(fol. 48) Incipiunt Multiplicationes G. ad Constantinum et alia minora opuscula—Practica Geometriæ—(fol. 129) Domini Franconis de Quadratura Circuli L. v—(fol. 156) Liber Franconis de Quadratura Circuli expicit—Incipit liber de Eadem Re . . fol.

 We consider this collection to be highly important in one point of view, namely, that it progressively illustrates the two previous manuscripts, or vice versâ.

On examining this manuscript, it is very evident that some time must have elapsed between the writing of the first eight leaves and the remainder of the volume. Melancthon, in its commencement, had evidently intended to imitate the type of the roman character; and, from the various sizes of the writing occurring even in these first sixteen pages, it is very clear that he was not quite master of the task he had undertaken.

It may be here necessary to observe, and important in tracing the same hand through different styles, that the small letter g is written in two ways in these first sixteen pages; the one corresponding with that peculiarly formed, as occurring in the two previous manuscripts; while the other agrees with that occurring throughout the remaining portion of the present volume, which part may have been written some years afterwards, and in which the first mentioned letter g occurs not in one single instance: this circumstance tends much to prove that Melancthon, on determining any particular style, continued it, in most instances, throughout his undertaking.

Having requested Mr. Ottley to give his opinion of one of the paper-marks in this volume assigned, he did us the favour to write as follows:

"The enclosed leaf is certainly Italian; perhaps about 1520. I find that I have traced it from a print of Moceto, engraved at the end of the 15th century, but which may have been printed a few years afterwards: also from one of Agostino Veneziano (first impression) dated 1531: also from a first impression of a print by Caraglius, of about the same date; but neither of them the same identical mould, though almost exactly the same. The ladder is the arms of the great family Della Scala."

It may be further observed, that the inhabitants of Central Germany appear for a long time to have procured great part of their paper from Vienna and Lombardy.

The illustrious MELANCTHON could scarcely have used any line more strongly conveying the fullest extent of his meaning: and it is certainly a most extraordinary circumstance, that this volume should, in the first place, have remained unmutilated; whilst we have every reason to believe, that the library of Melancthon, after his death, must have been subjected to a severe scrutiny; and, in the second place, that it should have remained undiscovered, or rather its intent unnoticed, for now nearly Three Centuries.

extracts from the scriptures comprise one hundred and forty-eight examples, of which the 20th, 21st, 22d, and 23d, are given in fac-similes as specimens: see plate 7, No. 7.

The satirical and exceedingly curious poem on the Mass consists of fifty-seven four-line stanzas. The epitaph is given in fac-simile: the date, 1527, which is in red ink, appears to have been added since the writing of the vol.

Dr. Cox, in his interesting Life of Melancthon, chapter 5, p. 209, informs us:—"The transactions relating to the abolition of private masses, constitute a very important part of the proceedings of this extraordinary year (1521). It afforded the highest satisfaction to Luther in his retirement to find that the Augustinian Friars, at Wittemberg, had ventured upon an attempt to abolish the popish mode of celebrating private masses; but the Elector felt some alarm, and deputed Pontanus, one of his counsellors, to remonstrate with the church and university upon their proceedings. Melancthon was chosen, with five others, Justus Jonas, John Doltz, Andrew Carlostadt, Jerome Schurff, and Nicolas Armsdorff, to investigate the business; and in their report, they not only expressed their approbation of this zeal, but urged the Elector "to put an end to the Popish Masses throughout his whole territory, and not to be deterred by the reproaches of those who would brand him with the name of Heretic or Hussite."

The Articles of Faith are divided into two parts; the first containing twenty-two articles, of which the first four are given in fac-simile; the other part is concerning the ceremonies, &c. of the church.

Middleton, in his Biographia Evangelica, vol. i, p. 479, states—"The Diet of Augsburg was held in June, 1530. Nothing cost Melancthon more pains than the task that was given him this year to draw up a Confession of Faith, which is called the Augsburg Confession; because it was presented to the Emperor at the diet in that city. Melancthon drew up this Confession of Faith out of the memoirs sent to the Elector of Saxony. It was divided into two parts:—the first contained twenty-one articles upon the chief point of religion: as, the unity of God, original sin, the incarnation, justification, the gospel ministry, the church, the civil government, the day of judgment, free-will, the cause of sin, faith, good works, and the adoration of saints. The other part was concerning the ceremonies and usages of the church, which the protestants said were abused; such as the communion in both kinds, the marriages of priests, confession, abstinence from meats, monastic vows, and ecclesiastical jurisdiction."

There is little doubt but the Articles of Faith drawn up in the present volume were written at an earlier period than 1530; which circumstance clearly proves that Melancthon, in drawing up the Celebrated Augsburg Confession, founded it upon that which he had previously made.

The satirical poem on the Pope, which concludes the volume, consists of eleven nine-line stanzas, each stanza commencing with the following line

Ich will fürsie kein Pfaff mehr seyn.

4634 Psalter, verteutscht durch Johann Bugenhagen auz Pomern . . Basel. Adam Petri, 1526, fol.

 At the end of this printed version of the Psalms occur, in manuscript, a series of Annotations, in German, upon each Psalm; and at the end is written in red ink, "Vollendet, &c.," as given in fac-simile: see the prefixed plate,

These Annotations, which appear to have been copied from another manuscript, are followed by introductory remarks from Martin Butzer (Bucer), Martin Luther, Phil. Melancthon, and Joh. Pomeranus (Bugenhagen).

To these succeed fifteen Psalms, in German, preceded by an instruction, that they are intended to be sang to the following tunes:—"Oh, God of Heaven, &c." "In this trouble I cry to Thee," &c.

The writing of the German portion corresponds precisely with that in Melancthon's Common Place Book, as is seen by the annexed fac-simile; while that in Latin, and the marginal notes which occur in the printed portion, agree with those in many of the volumes throughout the collection. At the end of the volume Melancthon appears to have enumerated various books lent to some of his friends.

MELANCTHONIS COLLECTANEA AUTOGRAPHA.

4635 MELANCHTHONIS (PHILIPPI) OPUSCULA PHILOSOPHICA:—De Supputatione Motus Solis — De Conversione temporis oblati in tempus Astronomicum — De Reductione — De Medio Solis motu inveniendo — De Auge Inveniendo — De Argumento Solis — De Æquatione, &c. — De Hypothesibus Circuli facientibus ad intelligendum Calculum tabularum Brutemicarum — Difinitiones Circuli — Explicatio Diagrammatis, &c. Wittebergæ, 1553

 This manuscript is written in somewhat the same character as that which has been hitherto known, and acknowledged as the writing of Melancthon; it is bound at the end of the following work.

Pithsani (Johannis) Perspectiva Communis

4636 MELANCHTHONIS (PHILIPPI) APPENDIX ad CHRONICON CARIONIS . . . 4to

 This Appendix is at the end of the original edition of Carion's, or, more properly speaking, Melancthon's Chronicle, published at Wittenberg in 1531. The story relating to the origin of this his celebrated Chronicle thus runs:— "Carion was a Professor of Mathematics at Francfort, near Wittenberg, and having written a Chronicle in German, wished, before printing it, that his friend Melancthon should correct it: Melancthon, however, finding it perhaps so incorrect and imperfect, in lieu of correcting it wrote the present volume, to which the name of Carion appeared, both on the title and at the end of the dedication.

The writing of the appendix or additions is in the same style as of the previous manuscript, only that it is written more heavily; it also corresponds precisely with the fac-simile of the writing given in Dr. Cox's Life of him: see plate 7, No. 9.

4637 MELANCHTHONIS (PHILIPPI) OPUSCULA THEOLOGICA; POEMATA; EPISTOLÆ AD MARTINUM LUTHERUM; PAULUM EBERUM: CASPARUM CRUCIERUM, HENRICUM OCTAVUM, REGEM ANGLIÆ, ET EPISTOLARUM AD P. MELANCTHONEM COPIÆ . . . fol.

 SOME EXTRAORDINARY CIRCUMSTANCES RELATIVE TO THE LITERARY PROPERTY OF MELANCTHON MUST HAVE TAKEN PLACE SHORTLY AFTER THE PERIOD OF HIS DEATH, OR HOW CAN IT BE ACCOUNTED FOR, THAT THIS,

HIS COMMON PLACE BOOK,

SHOULD HAVE ESCAPED THE NOTICE OF ALL THOSE WHO HAVE WRITTEN UPON HIS WORKS, EVEN INCLUDING HIS OWN SON-IN-LAW, DR. PEUCER, THE EDITOR OF THEM.

THIS MOST INTERESTING VOLUME CONTAINS UPWARDS OF THREE HUNDRED PIECES, WRITTEN BY THE HAND OF MELANCTHON: MANY OF THEM ARE UNPUBLISHED, AND OF THE GREATEST INTEREST.

The index at the commencement of the volume (from which the one annexed is principally copied), is also written by MELANCTHON, as far as the reference to page 509; after which it has been continued by Dr. Kloss, who informs us, that Professor A. de Watte has, in his own hand-writing, pointed out where the letters of Luther have been printed; this circumstance is observed by the star opposite the page referred to.

The Manuscript Collection, Letters, &c. relating to Luther and Melancthon, which here follow, from page 636 to 802 inclusive, and again from 811 to 825, are all written at a later period by an after possessor of the volume; and it may be curious to notice, that the hand of Melancthon has, in this continuation of the volume, been, in many cases, closely imitated. The intervening portion, and that concluding the volume in the writing of Melancthon, is enumerated as under :—

The periods of the execution of manuscripts upon paper are often to be more correctly ascertained from the water-marks of the paper, than from the peculiar character of their writing, as the style of writing continued with little difference from one century to another, more particularly in Monasteries or Colleges, from whence a great portion of the manuscripts existing have emanated; so that, judging from the writing alone, a MS. of the fourteenth century might oftentimes be ascribed to the fifteenth, and vice versâ.

Being anxious to ascertain the date, as far as possible, of the present volume, and not agreeing with Dr. Kloss as to the period to which he had placed it, we addressed ourselves to our friend, Mr. Ottley, whom, we knew, had made this subject his particular study; and in answer to our enquiry, he writes as follows:—

"I have found this paper-mark in a leaf coming from a book of accounts at the Hague, of the year 1518; and I am of opinion that, as nearly as may be, this is the true date of this specimen."

4670 TRITHEMII (JOH.) DE VIRIS ILLUSTRIBUS ORDINIS S. BENEDICTI, L. II, 1492—Liber de Laude Scriptorum, Completus, 1492 . . 4to
